Introduction to Tarotology - The study of Tarot

Hello & welcome to the magical world of Tarot! Whether you've had a session before or are entirely new to this, I'm sure you're curious and excited to know more. :)

Tarot is a mirror to your soul, a reflection of your subconscious mind, and a connection between your higher self. It is very intellectually stimulating. There is so much to study with the Tarot. It's an insanely deep rabbit hole; I can't even begin to tell you all the things you might be provoked to consider & explore. Philosophy, classic narratives & mythology, psychology, art composition, symbolism, several occult studies/sciences, history. It's practically a liberal arts curriculum in and of itself.

But I'm going to refrain from directly listing Why Should You Learn Tarot? Simply because I truly believe that the gains for every student of Tarot is unique and highly relies on who they are inwardly. After reading for 9+ years, here is how Tarot has deeply impacted my life:

1. Reading for people from all walks of life is like traveling through time. You get to intensely live a thousand lives in one lifetime, and that too while embracing your own. When I look back at my younger self, I realise how far I have come. The wisdom I have gained by reading for others has undoubtedly shaped me into a better human: an empathetic friend, a passionate lover and a forgiving family member. These experiences are undoubtedly my greatest take from practicing Tarot.
2. Being able to alter my surroundings using Tarot has been a blessing. There is this thing about our immediate environment: If the people around us are not vibrating at a similar frequency as us, we will face blocks irrespective of our attempts to grow. After learning Tarot thoroughly, I noticed that I could help my friends & family identify blocks and provide practical solutions to help them elevate spiritually. The emission of their happiness brought peace to me and reduced conflicts in my life. It's always such a beautiful experience to watch this happen!

3. My Querents form a major community which is now an important part of my life. I have gained some life-long friends who have shown immense faith and trust in the process. Their vulnerability and authenticity has been the most empowering fuel to my growth as a reader.
4. A single Tarot session is of course useful because of the clarity one receives, along with a roadmap to work forward. But once you learn to read the cards, you will be versatile in your problem solving abilities. Instead of getting consumed by my emotions, I have developed a habit of inner reflections using cards. It's magical!

Can Tarot predict the future?

Now, as a reader who uses Tarot as a tool for spiritual reflection, rather than fortune telling, my early impulses were to quickly reframe Tarot as a mirror rather than a predictive tool. But, now after a few more years of reading, I offer a bit more of a blunt answer.

Yes. I actually do believe that tarot can tell us our future.

When reading for myself and others, the cards have hinted towards new or severed relationships, new jobs, pregnancies, accidents and even travel. Whether or not you want to call these synchronicities, divination, or coincidences is totally up to you. However, here's what I have come to believe - a tarot reading can and will often point to events that will eventually happen.

I believe the ability of the cards to "predict" anything is inconsequential, because I don't believe the future is fixed. The very act of showing up to the cards themselves changes possible outcomes. What would you have done if the Tarot guidance wasn't provided to you? What remains in all of these outcomes is the choice that will still be yours to make. Hence, you have a lot more power over a predefined future and I certainly do not read cards for future prediction alone.

Ultimately, I believe that we are always co-creating our futures with the divine, and so any “prediction” is merely just a reflection of how we’re currently constructing our realities using our current frequency. Divination, I believe, can be compared to a spiritual weather report. You can know that rain is coming, it’s up to you to grab the umbrella or stay inside.

I find 100% value in Tarot and I feel it is highly underrated and misunderstood. Imparting this knowledge to you and eventually making Tarot a household, self-help, spiritual tool is what I’m determined to work towards. Rest assured, I will provide a culmination of my knowledge and will see to it that you find unexpected value in this course. :)

About Me

Hello, I'm Anika Beri, an Architect turned full-time Reader. My Tarot journey began in 2014 during college, when I started reading cards for my close buddies. Eventually, people of all ages, races, and communities started seeking answers after benefiting from their first sessions.

The curious and skeptic me wanted to make sense of the accuracy my readings provided, which led me to dig deeper and go all in. I completed my diploma in Tarot Reading from International School of Astrology, New Delhi and have been practicing as a professional reader thereafter. In 2018, I expanded my arena of interest and expertise by completing my Advanced Course in Vedic Astrology.

My 9+ years long exciting journey has allowed me to gain an experience of over 8000+ one-on-one sessions, 20+ festivals and 40+ stalls. What initially was a mere prank on my friends, became a guidance tool to bring clarity to thousands of empowered humans.
